Shanghai DP On Way To Israel Hold Reunions With N.Y. Kin

Nearly 500 persons made their way to Ellis Island for joyous reunions with relatives among the 489 Jewish refugees who arrived on their way from Shanghai to Israel and Europe. Excited talk, laughter and happy tears were the rule of the day in the white-tiled 100-by-40-foot visiting room where refugees embraced their kin after separations as long in some cases as forty years.

Five boatloads of visitors—one in the morning and four in the early afternoon—crossed the upper bay in a driving snowstorm to spend an hour with their relatives.

"'Operation Visiting' went off much more smoothly than we expected," reported Robert Smith, supervisor of security on the island. "There was no confusion, and our plan of calling the visitees into the visiting room while their visitors were still on the ferry—from lists telephoned from South Ferry—worked out very well.

"The way they stood it was wonderful," Mr. Smith continued. "They looked as fresh as if they had just come from a holiday."

On this point, however, many of the refugees demurred. The general high spirits evident on the "liberty train" as it approached New York had given way to depression at the prison-like atmosphere of the island, heightened by the bleak gray day outdoors, says the New York Times.

Many of the travelers expressed bitterness at the mixup between the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and the Ellis Island commissaries as a result of which there was no food from Sunday noon until Monday morning. Unloading operations at the B. & O. terminal in Jersey City lasted more than three hours after the train's arrival at 9 P.M. and many of the refugees were not assigned beds until 3 o'clock in the morning.

[redacted]

They were not allowed to telephone—officials said that there were not enough telephone booths to accommodate them—and that they received no English newspapers. Yiddish newspapers were distributed in the morning, but 95 per cent of the travelers do not read Hebrew characters, a spokesman said.

The refugees spent most of the day chatting or playing cards in two large gymnasium-like rooms with barred windows. One of the rooms would command a fine view of lower Manhattan on a clear day. Candy and cigarettes were available at a canteen.

Mr. Smith expressed regret that the travelers had to be put up in quarters designed as detention barracks. He said no attempt was made to place barriers between refugees and visitors, but that the visiting room had once served for meetings with enemy aliens. During the first visit some persons misunderstood the purpose of a row of tables still ranged lengthwise down the center of the room.

Parcels of candy, canned foods, clothing and travel necessities were brought by the visitors and friends. The refugees left several days later for Staten Island to embark on the General Stewart, the Army transport chartered by the International Refugee Organization.

Ending the first leg of the 15,000-mile journey from Shanghai to the new State of Israel as part of "Operation Freedom," 447 Jewish refugees came into port at San Francisco, Cal., and boarded a "liberty train" for New York.

The displaced persons, stateless for the most part, who had fled Germany and other European countries ahead of Hitler's armies, were without visas and traveled under guard until they boarded ship at New York.

As they came through the Golden Gate aboard the American President Liner vessel that brought them there in a seventeen-day crossing of the Pacific, many tossed copper and silver coins overboard as a symbol that they looked forward to a new life after their troublous years.

They came by way of the Pacific instead of taking the shorter route to the westward because of nominal control of the Suez Canal by Egypt, which is in conflict with Israel. Their transportation is being paid for by the International Refugee Organization, an agency of the United Nations. The fare from Shanghai to New York is $278 per person.

Macky Gaberman, 39 years old, who worked for the United States Navy in Shanghai and who, with Dr. Ernest Elias, 38, a former Viennese physician, served as spokesman for the group, said all of his colleagues had been stateless for more than ten years and some as long as thirty.

The cramped, baggage-littered atmosphere aboard the special was reminiscent of troop-trains, complicated by the presence of women and children, half a dozen of whom were infants in their first year. Suitcases clustered with the [illegible] baby-carriages cluttered the vestibules of the train's five Pullmans and eight coaches. Three baggage cars were also attached.

The group includes ninety-four men and women over 60 and thirty-three children under 12. They were assigned to the Pullman cars. Youngest in the group is 22-day-old Julian Shteiman, who was born in mid-Pacific to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Shteiman.

How they felt about going to Israel was put succinctly by Wolf Rubenstein, a fifty-one-year-old tailor who went to China from Russia in 1920 and whose entire family, including his parents, his brother and sister, were killed by the Nazis.

"I'm a Jewish patriot," he said proudly. "Israel is where I belong. Nobody can tell me 'go out!' I'm an old soldier. I'll fight again if I have to."

Nobody came to visit Mr. Rubenstein. He sat quietly, reading a Yiddish newspaper, the first one he had seen in thirty-five years. All around him, fellow refugees were hugging and kissing their relatives, who were allowed to

Decide To Stop Talk, Start U. J. A. Drive

Henry Morgenthau jr., former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, formally assumed office as general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal's 1949 campaign for $250,000,000, following the collapse of the opposition to his leadership. The opposition to Mr. Morgenthau had been based solely on his insistence that Henry Montor be put in sole charge of fund raising. As his first official act Mr. Morgenthau appointed Mr. Montor to the disputed post.

Noting that one objective of the U. J. A. is to resettle at least 250,000 Jews in Israel this year, Mr. Morgenthau called on the entire Jewish population to go forward in a spirit of unity. In announcing the designation of Mr. Montor, who had been the object during the internal fight, Mr. Morgenthau said:

"Under the authority given to me to administer an effectively directed campaign, I was given the right to chose my own assistants. I am happy to announce that I have appointed Henry Montor to conduct the 1949 campaign of the United Jewish Appeal under my leadership. The Palestine Economic Corporation, of which Mr. Montor is vice-president, has agreed to grant him a leave of absence for this purpose.

"In Mr. Montor, I will have as my good right arm a man who has proved himself to be the best and most devoted fund-raiser for Israel and for the other causes represented in the United Jewish Appeal. His understanding and his great capacities were the most decisive factors in the development of the U. J. A. as the largest fund-raising organization in Jewish history. During my service in the campaign in the last two years I have come to know Henry Montor not only as an executive of extraordinary ability, but as a man of the highest integrity, impeccable character and rare devotion to the needs of his people."

Mr. Morgenthau was general chairman of the 1947 and 1948 campaigns.

The decision to start the drive was based on agreement reached by the Joint Distribution Committee, the Jewish National Fund and the United Service for New Americans, beneficiaries of the United Jewish Appeal.

Group Raising Vast Sum

The American campaign of Histadrut, the Israeli Labor Federation, to raise $10,000,000 for its work in Israel, was started in New York at a luncheon of presidents of 500 benevolent and fraternal societies.

Representative Emanuel Celler of Brooklyn, addressing the group at the Pythian Plaza, 135 West Seventieth Street, warned against complacency because the State of Israel has begun to function as a political entity. He said that Great Britain's "reluctant recognition", at the insistence of public opinion, by no means indicated that she was out of Palestine. He said Israel must remain alert to the uses to which Britain might yet put Egypt and Trans-Jordan to serve her own purposes.

Mr. Celler also said there was a strong possibility that President Truman would appoint a mission to go to Palestine. Such action, he said, could be construed as a gesture of friendship and moral support. He added that the mission might be composed of sincere friends of Israel, skilled in agriculture, commerce, industry and science, and should help Israel in its economic development program.

The Representative added Mr. Truman soon would announce an immigration quota for Israelis who might want to come to the United States. He said that the quota was now being prepared by United States immigration officials.

In urging support of the Histadrut campaign, Mr. Celler pointed out that the organization faced the task of rehabilitating more than 500,000 Jewish immigrants in Palestine during the next ten years. He said the integration of the immigrant into the political, social and economic program of the country fell to Histadrut. He emphasized that Israel needed help as vitally now as at any previous time.

Egypt Conceals Terror Against Jews

The Egyptian censorship has largely succeeded in concealing the facts about the general reign of terror directed against residents of Egypt who are citizens of foreign countries, non-Moslems and particularly against Jews, The American Jewish Committee has assembled a number of official decrees issued by the Egyptian government, and reliable eye-witness reports that throw some light on the true situation.

Since May, 1948, a number of official measures have been issued which were in fact applied almost exclusively against Jews. Thus Jews were not permitted to leave the country. This ban applied to them regardless of their nationality, and in spite of the protests of various diplomatic representatives of foreign countries in Egypt.

Various economic measures tend to destroy the economic position of the 75,000 Jews in Egypt. A so-called Company Law provides that all Egyptian firms and all Egyptian branches of foreign firms must employ at least 75 per cent Egyptians of white collar personnel, and at least 90 per cent of laborers. The full impact of this legislation upon citizens of foreign countries generally, and the Jews of Egypt particularly, can be understood only if it is realized that despite the fact that 90 per cent of the Jews living in Egypt were born there, only about 5,000 were able to qualify as "Egyptians" under the terms of the Company Law. The administrative interpretation of the Company Law indeed makes Egyptians and Egyptian Moslems synonymous.

Homes and businesses have been arbitrarily seized as part of a deliberate policy followed by the government of ruining the once prosperous Jewish community, and important properties have been wrecked [illegible] of direct encouragement of the government. About 500 people are now in concentration camps on the grounds that they allegedly supported the Jewish community in Palestine or were members of the

Plan Castor Groves For Plastic Use

As a result of intensive research carried on at the Weismann Institute of Science, the indigenous castor oil bean has been converted into a wide variety of plastics, from nylons to building insulation. These processes may revolutionize Israel's industrial base. A $3,000,000 corporation already has been formed and it will construct its first building in May.

Weizmann Institute scientists have discovered also the secret of removing the saline content of water, thereby making possible great strides in irrigation. This discovery was made in conjunction with the Palestine Research Association at Harvard. By reason of it, arid wastes of the Negeb desert area in southern Palestine, are expected to be more speedily reclaimed with the possibility of a use for castor trees.

Plans for the corporation were announced by Meyer Weisgal, executive director of the Institute, who recently arrived from New York to make plans for the trip to the United States scheduled for April by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Provisional President of Israel. The head of the company will be Harold Goldenberg, vice-president of the Palestine Economic Corporation.

The Government already has granted certain concessions for bringing in foreign capital for the project. Two United States plastic and textile companies are cooperating, along with a French concern. All will send their technicians to launch the project, which is expected to start a new cycle of industrial development.

Dr. David Ernst Bergmann, director of science at the institute, declared that one of the principal objectives at the moment was to convert agriculture into the production of industrial and chemical products, as it has been proved that agriculture, save on an exceptionally large scale, does not pay. He felt that sooner or later all the Arab countries would realize this and would eventually come to Israel for technical and scientific aid.

It is planned to develop castor tree groves in twenty-seven parts of Israel and to bring the development to a point where oil can be

Church Official Warns U.S. Jews On Split Loyalty With Israel

Anti-Semitism, the "terrible curse of our time," is growing in the United States, Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, associate general secretary of the World Council of Churches, warned in New York. He made this statement after he had told a luncheon gathering of the American Council for Judaism that American Jews must not identify themselves with the political State of Israel if they hope to be considered full-fledged members of the United States community.

Speaking at the George Washington Hotel, Lexington Avenue and Twenty-third Street, Dr. Leiper said Americans of the Jewish faith must be on their guard against a "dual nationality" that would divide their patriotic allegiance between Israel and the United States. Such a split loyalty will brand Jews in America permanently as a national and "racial" minority, different from the rest of the nation, Dr. Leiper asserted.

The Christian churchman, who is ecumenical secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, called on Jewish leaders to come out publicly with an expression of sympathy for "the 800,000 victims of the violent expulsion of Arabs from Israel." This action is vitally needed now, Dr. Leiper said, to allay a rising tide of anti-Semitic feeling, brought about in part by "the work of a few extremists and terrorists who have compromised the new state in Palestine at the very time of its institution."

"We were making good progress in overcoming anti-Semitism before the war," he declared in an interview after his prepared address, "but now the trend seems to be the other way, except in the college groups, which are relatively free of prejudice against Jews."

One of the main proponents of the idea of a World Council of Churches when that body was set up last summer in Amsterdam, Dr. Leiper recalled that the Council's executive council had been unwilling to take any public stand on the plight of thousands of Arab refugees in the Middle East out of fear of stirring up latent anti-Semitism in the United States and other countries.

Jews today should make it clear

U.S. Leaders Are In Europe On Tour

"At least 24,500 Jewish displaced persons are expected to arrive in America during 1949", William Rosenwald, honorary president of the United Service for New Americans, told the members of the United Jewish Appeal Overseas Delegation as they toured the Hotel Marseilles, United Service shelter in New York for immigrants, the day before their departure for a survey of conditions in Europe and Israel. "If present immigration laws are liberalized, we anticipate that many additional thousands will find haven in this country during the year", Mr. Rosenwald said. The forty-three men and women, made the trip overseas at their own expense to determine the needs behind the $250,000,000 campaign of [illegible] Appeal.

[illegible] of the new refugees, the Jewish leaders from communities all over the country were familiarized with the care and assistance that United Service offers to new arrivals in America. While at the shelter, the members of the delegation, in addition to hearing from Mr. Rosenwald, who is also a national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, were addressed by Edwin Rosenberg, president of the United Service. Three new immigrants, including Hirsch Schwartzberg, for-

DENTAL DECAY

Scientists are conducting exhaustive studies to determine the effect of fluorine in combatting dental decay. But it will be some years before these studies are completed. Parents can do much to protect their children's teeth now, however, by providing nourishing foods, cutting down on sweets and seeing to it that teeth are brushed carefully after each meal.

American Jewish Committee Reports Hatemongers Busy In U.S.

Organized anti-Semitic activity in the United States, which began to decline after the war, continued at a low ebb during 1948. By the end of the year, however, there were indications that a reversal of the trend might occur. For example, domestic and foreign hatemongers were collaborating more than at any time since Pearl Harbor; there was a greater tendency on the part of anti-Semitic activities to pool their operations; the emphasis on dissemination of a wide variety of hate literature in place of holding meetings was more pronounced than ever before.

The major theme of anti-Semitic propagandists during 1948 was the identification of Jews with Communism and Soviet Russia. Linked with this was the charge of Jewish "conspiracy" to control the world, derived from the forgery, The Protocols of the Elders of Zion. Other anti-Semitic canards were "adjusted" to the Communism-conspiracy concept. Thus, the United Nations, the New Deal, and the Truman administration were held to be part of the plan of Communists and Jews to rule the world. The Republican Party was alleged to be a tool of Jewish "international bankers," themselves said to be agents of Communists and the Sanhedrin. The issue of Palestine was exploited and allegations were made that Zionism was a world government, which planned to avail itself of the resources of the Red Sea, imagined to contain most of the world's wealth in mineral deposits. Similarly, anti-Semites charged that Jews established control over the atom bomb for use by Russia. Other favorite targets of attack included immigration of Jewish DP's to this country, Morgenthau Plan "brutality" against Germany, and alleged diabolical Jewish control of Hollywood.

The most dynamic rabble-rouser and hate-publicist of 1948 was Gerald L. K. Smith, whose meetings for many years thrived upon publicity resulting from picketing, other counter-demonstrations, and press denunciations. Largely because of an intelligent application of the quarantine treatment, resulting in considerably smaller audiences because of the loss of publicity, Smith moved his headquarters from Detroit to St. Louis.

Until September, Smith lived in Tulsa, Oklahoma, and held few meetings. His staff, however, held periodic meetings of the Christian Nationalist Crusade at St. Louis, which were seldom attended by more than fifty people. In an attempt to exploit the Presidential election, Smith duplicated his action of 1944, set up a "Christian Nationalist Party", and staged its "convention" in St. Louis last August. There, he had himself nominated on a "platform" which pledged expulsion of all Jews and Negroes from the country. Among the speakers at the convention were Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley (retired), who in 1939 was revealed by the Dies Committee to have attended a secret conference with Fritz Kuhn and other hate-leaders, and Ernest Elmhurst, an international anti-Semitic propagandist.

During October and November, Smith held a series of meetings in Los Angeles, where his appearances three years ago were attended by much public clamor. Although his initial meetings were well-attended, the community and the press, with one exception, ignored his presence, resulting in dwindling attendances. Smith is now planning a series of meetings in the East. Opal Tanner is reported to have purchased a building in St. Louis, which will be jointly occupied by the United Farmers of America and the various Smith enterprises. The United Farmers was formed in 1945 by Carl Mote as a rump organization of the National Farmers' Guild after the Guild ousted him from its presidency because of his pro-Nazi publication. Smith is presently endeavoring to gain control of the United Farmers, with success likely.

George W. Armstrong, octogenarian millionaire of Fort Worth, Texas, continued his activity in 1948 largely by exploiting the Dixiecrat issue in anti-Semitic advertisements in newspapers in the Southwest, and by publication of Traitors, an addition to his catalog of vicious pamphlets.

Armstrong's announcement in 1947 that he intended to donate half of his fortune to the Judge Armstrong Foundation for the publication of his anti-Semitic literature, and the support of the hate movement, stirred anti-Semitic leaders to renewed activity. Particularly, it provided an impetus for increased dissemination of anti-Semitic literature since Armstrong believes that anti-Semitism may best be furthered through printed material.

Several activists have received contributions from him and some, notably Gerald L. K. Smith, visited his plantation near Natchez, Mississippi, or his home at Fort Worth. To these he announced his "overall" plan of eventually establishing "centers of activity" in such cities as New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco, where wholesale depots for anti-Semitic literature would be maintained, and liaison established among anti-Semitic leaders for the co-ordination of the distribution of the literature and other forms of activity.

Armstrong has appointed General Moseley the manager of his fund to further anti-Semitism. However, while Moseley urged that it be devoted to a single unified movement of militarists, Armstrong still prefers to support diversified movements. The Judge Armstrong Foundation was incorporated in Texas in 1945 for charitable purposes. In view of its actual uses the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has been requested to revoke the foundation's tax-exemption status and action is expected shortly.

During 1948, a greater exploitation of the "British Israel" movement as a springboard for anti-Semitic propaganda occured. Its extremist wing holds that only the "Aryan" English-speaking peoples and not the Jews are true Israelites.

Typical of the anti-Semitic activists working among German-Americans during 1948 was Kurt Mertig, whose front organizations are the German-American Republican League and the Citizens' Protective League, which was officially listed as subversive by the Attorney General during the year. Mertig maintains that the Jews caused the war and that the Germans are "victims of Jewish revenge"; that the Allies should forthwith evacuate Germany, and that German-Americans must vote as a racial political bloc to insure a "softpeace" for Germany. Mertig's meetings, held less frequently, were poorly attended. Among the anti-Semitic "mothers' groups," the National Blue Star Mothers of Pennsylvania (also known as the Current Events Club) met regularly during the year, and achieved public notice by picketing the conventions of both major political parties in Philadelphia, distributing hate-literature and shouting anti-Semitic slogans. Gerald Winrod of Wichita, Kansas; Harvey Springer, of Denver, Colorado; and Lawrence Reilly of Detroit, formerly a Smith aide, continued to

The National Social Welfare Assembly, the central national organization for social welfare planning in America, elected Frank L. Weil, president of JWB, the Jewish Welfare Board, as its new president. Mr. Weil, a founder of the Assembly, has served as chairman of its executive committee since the organization's inception, three years ago. The Assembly comprises forty affiliate national voluntary organizations, 12 federal government agencies and four associate groups. Its purpose is to facilitate more effective operation of organized social welfare, to study and define social welfare problems and human needs and develop plans of action to meet them, and to act on behalf of social welfare where representation of its interests are indicated.

A spasm twitched her usually placid mouth. "And I suppose," she asserted venomously, it doesn't upset you to hear that your daughter has taken to going out with a Jew?"

He could not have been more dumbfounded if she had exploded a bomb in the peaceful living room. A kind of horror clouded his mild brown eyes.

The remark was so precipitate, so unpremeditated however that it surprised her almost as much as it did him. And before she knew it she was enmeshed in a welter of exaggeration that fairly took her breath away. She had no definite knowledge that Jane had ever gone out with the Ginsberg boy, and as for sneaking behind people's backs, that was the closest thing to pure fabrication. Why then was she saying all these things? All she had to go on was the fact that on a single occasion she had answered the phone when he had rung up and had made it her business to find out who was calling before summoning Jane to the phone. Precious little, she realized, to support her fevered innuendoes about a mesalliance. She flushed guiltily under Roger's pained and unhappy scrutiny, and the knowledge that she was playing fast and loose with the truth, a failing to which she was not generally given, only reinforced her stubborn determination to see the thing through no matter what it might cost.

"You mean," she flung at him, "you don't object to her marrying a Jew?"

His answer did not satisfy her. At first he was evasive, suggesting that she was making a mountain out of a molehill and refusing to allow himself to be pinned down.

But something within her would not be denied, and eventually when she did succe the possibility seriously, she was ex ence. Meanwhile she utilized w "queer attitude" as a complete justi distortion of the truth. The actua

She stared at him a moment in shocked disbelief. Then, without a word, her face tingling as though it had been slapped, she turned away and, so as not to show her discomfiture, busied herself rearranging some Chelsea pieces on a Sheraton tier-table. When she had recovered herself sufficiently to hazard another glance in his direction, he was engaged in animated conversation with Mr. Boucher while the other men stood by with an air of interest. Blushing again at the memory of her humiliation, she told herself that he was nothing but a boor and a cheap lady-killer. Something on the style of her own son-in-law. She resolved not to see him about her medical condition. She would go to Dr. Harvey instead of Dr. Walsh.

Meanwhile Guy, in one of his more Puckish moods, had started in to bait Honoré Boucher. Right from the first he had been conscious of something tantalizingly familiar about Boucher's appearance, but he hadn't quite been able to place it. Then suddenly it came to him. Certainly, he was a famous figure in Canadian politics. He had been minister of—— in Mackenzie King's cabinet for a number of years,

JEWS ARE HUMAN

To say that this is the greatest book you have ever read is a trite statement. We won't say it. At least not for the moment.

It's simply a story about Toronto people, Toronto doctors and patients, lawyers and judges, Jews and Gentiles.

The sample pages alongside are a fair indication of the quality and style of this important book. There are no better and no worse than the average of its 386 pages.

THIS GREAT NOVEL, written by a gifted Toronto novelist, in close collaboration with one of Toronto's leading obstetricians and gynecologists, sheds a light on doctors that is fair, honest and revealing. Yet it manages at all times to call a spade a spade.

Five, eight, ten, fifteen seconds elapsed. Seconds that seemed like years to the superintending nurse and to Les Pendrith, standing on the nurse's right, whose forehead, glistening with sweat, was almost as pale as the mask that hid his fleshy nose and granite jaw. Guy who, alone of the three, was perfectly composed, did nothing, absolutely nothing.

Twenty seconds passed and then the most miraculous thing happened. The puny mite, who up to this moment had not contracted a single voluntary muscle, slowly drew up its arms and spindly legs, screwed up its simian face, took a deep audible breath that was like a gasp, then expended the breath in a harsh, flat wail.

That wail settled everything. Guy knew from experience that where there was brain damage the baby could manage no more than a feeble grunt.

The superintending nurse expelled her own breath in a deep sigh of relief; Pendrith sighed also and wiped the sweat from his massive forehead with the sleeve of his surgical gown. Guy, with a little sardonic smile on his lips, turned and went back to the operating table with its brilliant overhead lights, its splendid paraphernalia, its profusion of soiled instruments and trays, its litter and debris, its agony of disciplined effort.

Desmond F. MacAuliffe says: "Here in this book as in few others, are set the tragic bewilderments and terrible experiences of a doctor with his own women patients and friends — the people you meet on College Street or on a Kingston Road street car.

"The reader's mind reverts to Flaubert and Huysmans as Mr. Allen's unforgettable phrases sear the mind like a knife drawn across the hesitating and reluctant flesh."

AMERICAN JEWISH COMMITTEE REPORTS HATEMONGERS BUSY

mingle anti-Semitism with their evangelical activities. All of them made use of border Mexican radio stations to beam broadcasts toward the United States during the year.

During 1948, the activities of Nazi and fascist hate-mongers abroad had their greatest impact upon the American scene since 1941. Steady post-war growth of a revived international conspiracy of anti-Semitic activities has occurred, with liaison agents throughout the world coordinating their activities by formulating concerted plans, exchanging advice and information and facilitating the distribution of their literature abroad. Attempts at setting up smoothly functioning hate-cartels are not new.

International anti-Semitic conventions were held in Germany in the 1880's and at Budapest and Copenhagen in the 1920's. In 1937, the World Service International anti-Semitic Conference was held at Erfurt, Germany, under Nazi sponsorship, delegates from 24 countries (including Ernest Elmhurst and George Deatherage from U. S.) attending. The Nazis attempted to hold another international conference at Cracow in 1944, but were ordered by Hitler to abandon the project shortly after D-Day. Especially at Budapest in 1925, and at Erfurt in 1937, were the anti-Semitic leaders successful in establishing clearance bureaus for publicity, organizational activity, and even the encouragement of "strong-arm" shirt groups in the various countries.

Since the termination of hostilities, many interned activists have been released, while others who were inactive for "the duration" began cautiously to resume their activity. The progressive intensification and exploitation of the cold war between the East and the West has encouraged them to bolder and more ambitious activity on an international scale.

One of the mainstays of the international circuit is G. F. Green, of England, an indefatigable international liason agent and anti-Semitic publicist. Green wrote last October that plans to revive the world-wide hate syndicate on a formal organizational basis are already under way. A conference of "Nationalists" is planned for 1949, according to Green, who added that preliminary "discussions at various European centres" were taking place, and that "organizing secretaries in the various countries" would be notified. In listing the stated objects of the conference, Green includes the following: "to formulate a common policy of defence of European standards against Judaic-Communism; to simplify and coordinate propaganda activities; to select and publish standard works on the Jewish Question; to develop liaison between Nationalist organizations and to establish news services . . ."

Einar Aberg, a Swedish hate-monger, for the past two years has been engaged in flooding the mails with small-sized anti-Semitic and pro-Nazi leaflets printed in several languages, many of them containing cartoons from Streicher's Der Stuermer. These were received in large quantities in England, the Continent, South Africa, Australia and the United States. The Swedish Government, on being apprised of the circumstances by the American Jewish Committee, immediately commenced prosecution of Aberg, which resulted in a Court direction that Aberg report weekly to a mental institution for observation and treatment. These proceedings eventually terminated in a dismissal, and the Swedish authorities were considering new action to halt the flow of Aberg's venom. It now appears that Aberg, with the assistance of "friends", has gone to Argentina. During the time that Aberg was under prosecution in Sweden, several periodicals of the anti-Semitic press in the United States were able to print reports from Aberg, accompanied by appeals for aid.

During the year, two Fascist leaders made unsuccessful attempts to visit the U. S. They were Oswald Mosley and Oswald Pirow, Fascist leaders of England and South Africa, respectively. Oswald Mosley, since his release from internment at the war's end, has resumed activity with his Union Movement, which envisages the transformation of Great Britain and Europe into a unified corporative state, along traditional fascist lines, dominated by a single party. The Mosley program provides that the native manpower and resources of the continent of Africa be exploited for the benefit of the state. During the year, Mosley became the leader of a coalition of more than 50 Fascist and anti-Semitic organizations in Great Britain.

Pirow's South African movement is called The New Order. The front page of the October issue of its official weekly publication Die Nuwe Orde carried a tribute "In Memory of the Martyrs of Neurenberg", listing in large type, among others, the names of Goering, Von Ribbentrop, Hans Frank, Streicher and Seyss-Inquart, to-preached a white supremacy doc-Germany and Save Europe!" In April, Mosley and Pirow conferred at London for the purpose of coordinating their respective programs. Mosley is presently endeavoring to have his writings published in the United States, and has been contacting prospective collaborators in the U. S. In August, U. S. Immigration authorities were alerted to the possibility that Mosley might fly to Canada, obtaining a transit visa to stop off in the U. S. long enough to address Gerald Smith's Christian Nationalist Party convention at St. Louis. Because of the alertness of the Immigration Service, Mosley's planned visit did not materialize.

Up to the time of his death early in 1948, Henry Hamilton Beamish, South African anti-Semitic propagandist, was one of the principal international activists. Beamish, who was interned during the war, had been a delegate to the World Service International Anti-Semitic Convention at Erfurt, Germany in 1937. After his release, he resumed correspondence with anti-Semitic propagandists, including Adrien Arcand in Canada, and George W. Armstrong in the United States. At the time of his death, he was promoting a world-wide anti-Semitic coalition.

Beamish's place, however, has been filled by his ardent disciple, Ray K. Rudman, of Pietermaritzburg, South Africa. Rudman, who heads a group called Boernasie (Boer Nazis), has recently formed the League for Fair Play and Decency, distributing "nominations" for a variety of honorary and official posts to George W. Armstrong, Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, George Deatherage, Ernest Elmhurst, Elizabeth Dilling, Lyrl Van Hyning, Col. Sanctuary and Gerald L. K. Smith, as well as anti-Semitic activists in other countries. The recent Nationalist Party victory in the South African elections may have serious bearing upon anti-Semitic conditions in the United States and other countries, since a haven for Nazis and Fascists may very well be established in that country. One of the first acts of the new government, headed by Daniel Malan, was the release of Nazi internees. Another was the appointment of pro-Nazi Eric Luow to an important cabinet post. The Nationalist Party, preached a white supremacy doctrine called by the "arpatheid" (segregation), refuses to admit Jews as members.

In Canada, Adrien Arcand has already reconstituted his fascist movement, and, according to his own statement, is biding his time. During the year, reprints from his vitriolic publication, The Key to the Mistery (now defunct) were extensively circulated in the United States. Published in tabloid format, the most defamatory of Arcand's writings on The Protocols, the "Talmud exposes", and other anti-Semitic canards were collected in one issue. Among the active distributors of this item was Russell Roberts of Detroit, formerly a member of the notorious National Workers' League, who recently completed a jail term on a moral charge. The Canadian Social Credit Party, a radical "money-reform" movement which dominates the Province of Alberta, during the year cleansed itself of many bigots. Chief among those affected by this action was Social Credit M. P. Norman Jaques, an ardent Gerald L. K. Smith collaborator, who had made many trips to the U. S. in previous years in order to participate in Smith's "rallies."

The writings of Arnold Leese, British Fascist, received most extensive circulation by domestic anti-Semites during the year. Thus, Leese's book, The Jewish War of Survival was advertised and sold, while his mimeographed periodical, Gothic Ripples, received frequent quotations.

Some of the significant reports received during the latter part of the year reveal that a movement is now under way to bring Father Coughlin out of retirement and back to the airwaves. It has been reported that influential people are being presented with the argument that Father Coughlin is needed in the present ideological campaign against Communism. Too, Marwin K. Hart has been holding a series of confidential conferences with wealthy Nationalists for the purpose of forming a "Save America Committee", a project designed to attract reactionary elements who no longer find either of the major parties acceptable. Finally, it has been reported that Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley (retired) will shortly be associated with Gerald Smith's rabble-rousing enterprises.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS
by Don Graham

How many times have you said: "I must do . . .;" "I feel terrible about not writing to . . .;" "One of these days I'm going to see . . ."?

Such remarks show we all realize that procrastination is a bad habit — but that we are resigned to it. We're not really convinced that it pays to "do it now".

Yet the more we put off doing something because it is distasteful or difficult, the larger the task looms. It weighs on our minds, handicapping the performance of immediate duties and beclouding our pleasures. Obviously the sooner we do it, the happier we'll be.

Even trivial matters should be dealt with promptly in order to develop the action-habit. Is there someone you should write? If so, don't debate with yourself whether you'll write now or later. Reach for your pen!

Such spontaneous actions help to develop an efficiency that makes for success.

Amnesty Frees Stern Leader

In a final dramatic act, Israel's Provisional Government granted amnesty at Tel Aviv to all prisoners now held except those under life or death sentence and prisoners of war. The decree, which was passed unanimously, was sponsored by Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion.

The amnesty freed Nathan Friedman-Yellin, leader of the outlawed Stern Group, who had refused to accept probationary conditions for suspension of the sentence of eight years' imprisonment passed upon him the same day. The court found him guilty of having participated in underground activities.

This was the final act of the Israeli State Council, which is succeeded by the Constituent Assembly, elected in last month's general elections. Friedman-Yellin now takes his place in the Assembly. He was a candidate for the Fighters for the Freedom of Israel party, successor to the Stern Group. The party won one seat, to which Friedman-Yellin, who headed the party's list, is entitled.

In passing the sentence that has been annulled, the court said that it was prepared to free Friedman-Yellin and Shmulevitz if they would sign a declaration to abstain from underground activities, to accept police supervision for two years and to advise members of the organization to refrain from terrorist activities. Friedman-Yellin, defiantly banging his fist on the table, refused.

His principal objection was the injunctive that he report to the police over the two-year probation period, says the New York Times. His sentence, with its suspension, had been approved by Mr. Ben-Gurion as Defense Minister. The judgment was a 20,000-word document occupying eighty-six printed pages, and took all the trial day to deliver.

BOTANY SPELLS LIFE TO ISRAELI ECONOMY

By Dr. Michael Even-Ari, Department of Botany, Hebrew University, In Israel

Most people have a misconception of botany and of botanists. The word "botanist" carries for them the mental image of an old professor who with an umbrella and magnifying glass stands enchanted in front of a small flower, lost to the world. But botany and botanists of today are certainly not lost to the world. They are—as are all scientists today—valuable members of society, contributing their share to human progress.

In the same way, the Department of Botany of the Hebrew University, too, fulfills its double function as a promoter of both pure botanical science and the agricultural and other practical applications of botany in Israel.

When the first Jewish settlers came to Palestine, they found a country whose physical nature was only very scantily known to science. Our botanists, therefore, found their first function in the exploration of wild plant life in Palestine.

Besides enriching science with a great deal of new knowledge, important practical information was gathered during this exploration. It was found, for example, that certain plant societies can be used as indicators of salty soils or as indicators of ground water, important information when the most suitable place for a new settlement has to be decided upon.

Since a large part of Israel is desert, special attention has been paid to desert plant life. The typical desert plants offer interesting biological problems: how, for instance, do they obtain their water supply? What are the special adaptations of desert plants to these harsh conditions? For many years these questions have been studied, and the information gathered proved most valuable when the Yishuv found interest in the desert area of the Negev.

The Department of Botany has its special importance to our infant pharmaceutical industry. Because of the work of the Department of Botany, many pharmaceutical and medicinal plants used by the pharmaceutical industry—digitalis (for heart ailments), colchium (for the extraction of alkaloids), peppermint, sage, marjoram, valerians—are cultivated today in our settlements.

In addition to these practical applications of botany, the Department has also made its contribution to pure science. We possess today a Hebrew flora, a precise vegetational map enabling anyone to determine Israel's plants.

Finally, our botanists play their part in education. Our young people must learn to know our land, for knowledge brings love. To know and love the plants of a country means to know and love the country.

Hotel Man Offers Free Youth Center For Utica, N.Y.

Leo Oppenheimer, vice-president and manager of Hotel Hamilton, one of Utica's leading larger hotels, is going to help out the Oneida Country grand jury.

The jury recommended another youth center to cut down juvenile delinquency. The city said it did not have the money. So Mr. Oppenheimer has offered to turn part of his hotel into a center for youngsters and has promised them dancing with an orchestra, free of charge. Only soft drinks would be sold, he said.

Mr. Oppenheimer says he wants to do something for the youth of Utica. So he has offered to open the Rotunda Room on the main floor of the hotel, which used to be the main dining room, for the teen-agers.

No admission charge will be made and there will be no restrictions imposed, other than an insistence that the parties be orderly. He will not even want them to be under the eyes of chaperones, but rather to have them supervise their own dances. There will be no obligation on anyone to buy anything—not even a "coke"—if they do not want to. Mr. Oppenheimer will pay for the music himself.

To ascertain whether enough sentiment exists in Utica for a "coke" bar where boys and girls of high-school age may feel at home in pleasant surroundings and enjoy dancing without having to patronize questionable places, Mr. Oppenheimer is now asking for letters from parents to teen-agers and the young persons themselves. He wants to know how many nights a week such parties should be run and also to obtain ideas as how they should be conducted. It has been suggested that letters be addressed to "The Manager, Hotel Hamilton, Utica, N.Y."

A committee from Utica high schools is expected to go to Rochester in the near future, to study the operation of "The Barn," teen-age "coke" bar and club established by Frank Gannett, the publisher. The trip is being sponsored by Mr. Oppenheimer, who will provide cars for the trip, and all expenses, including meals, will be paid by him.

Mr. Oppenheimer plans to ask representatives from the schools and organizations of Utica to form a general committee to supervise operation of the project. Each of the following schools will be asked to name a boy and a girl, preferably a senior or junior; Utica Free Academy, Proctor High, Utica Catholic Academy, St. Francis de Sales High, New Hartford High and Whitesboro High School.

Mr. Oppenheimer says the "coke" bar will be operated as many nights a week as the committee desires. A number of extra features, including an amateur night, will be planned. The music will be provided by a complete orchestra.

ONCE OF MONTREAL, DOES HEART RESEARCH

By comparison with the female, the male is inherently a weakling in health in all periods of life from birth to death, a group of Harvard Medical School scientists reported after an extensive research project at Massachusetts General Hospital. This finding was announced during the scientific program of a New York Heart Association meeting at the New York Academy of Medicine, 2 East 103rd Street.

The speaker was Dr. Menard M. Gertler, a research fellow in medicine, who reported on work done by the Coronary Research Project at the hospital under the direction of Dr. Paul D. White and Dr. H. B. Sprague with associates from various fields of medicine and anthropology. Dr. Gertler is formerly of Montreal. He is married to the former Miss Anna Paull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Paull. They have a little daughter, Barbara.

To put it bluntly, as Dr. Gertler did, "available evidence indicates that there is an inherent weakness in the male, a sex-limited inferiority, so that by comparison with the female he is, actuarially speaking, a weakling at all periods of life from conception to demise."

This holds true not only for human beings, Dr. Gertler added, but throughout the animal kingdom. Females live longer and males are more prone to certain physical disturbances.

Dr. Gertler said that the research project began with a study of a number of cases of heart disease to combine many specialty studies into a search for the cause of coronary conditions. Of the first group of more than 100 case, the researchers found they were examining twenty-five apparently robust and muscular young men for every one woman victim.

The average age of the heart disease victims studied was 39.5 years, and Dr. Gertler added parenthetically that one of the women patients had her heart attack six months after she completed carrying two tons of coal packed in one-hundred-pound sacks from the basement to the street.

The group found that these young male coronary victims were exemplified by an individual "predominantly mesomorphic (muscular) with various degrees of endomorphy (bony) and a modicum of ectomorphy (fat)." Not all muscular men have coronary disease, Dr. Gertler said, but those with a particular hormonal, biochemical and metabolic union "experience the disease early and with frequency."

By drawing a "profile" of the body chemistry and general physical shape of the coronary patient, Dr. Gertler said that the normal population may be screened to preselect those members who may become victims and therapy may be started to delay the onset of the disease.

French Paper Comments On Court Action

The French language magazine of the Laurentians, L'Avenir du Nord, has commented on the court action against the Mont Tremblant Lodge instituted by two New York men for alleged breach of contract when the owner had them ejected from the hotel during the winter night because they were Jews.

L'Avenir du Nord wrote: "It is known that several hotels in the Laurentians do not accept Jews as guests. We also see in several places signs such as "Christians Only." In all justice, these anti-social and anti-Christian methods cannot be approved. We do not like to travel in Ontario and see signs in hotels which read, 'We Do Not Admit French Canadians.'

"The Jew's dollar is as good as that of the Irishman, the Scotsman, or the Frenchman and the tourist industry on which our Laurentian hotels depend suffers enormously from such discrimination between guests. Jews behave properly and if there are exceptions it would be proper to expel them as one would any other undesirable guest."

Plan To Honour Distinguished Leader's Birthday

Former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, Jr.; former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, Dr. Albert Einstein, Dr. John Haynes Holmes, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt head the list of notables on the National Committee of Sponsors for the celebration of Dr. Stephen S. Wise's seventy-fifth birthday in March. Prominent persons from all walks of life, as well as organizations, Jewish and non-Jewish, in which Dr. Wise has been active, are sponsoring a diamond jubilee dinner to honour Dr. Wise on Sunday, March 20, at the Hotel Biltmore, in New York.

In an interview in his study in the Synagogue House of the Free Synagogue, Dr. Wise said: "I was born in Budapest, the birthplace of Max Nordau and Theodor Herzl, on St. Patrick's Day, March 17, 1874. Possibly I acquired at birth my innate love for Zion and my lifelong career as a fighter. I came from a fighting family of rabbis. My grandfather fought for Hungary's freedom. My father fought at his father's side. I have battled throughout my life for many causes. First for Zionism, together with some of the great men of American Israel — men like Dr. Gustave Gotthelf, Prof. Richard Gotthelf, Dr. H. P. Mendes and Justice Louis D. Brandeis, that great Jew and one of the greatest Americans.

"My second battle has been for the Jewish people through the American and World Jewish Congress, for the millions of Jews everywhere who could never become rebuilders of Palestine. They required protection, the only protection Jews ought ever ask, viz., equal political rights. Together with Justice Brandeis, Judge Julian W. Mack, Justice Felix Frankfurter, Nathan Straus, Louis Lipsky, Pinchas Ruttenberg and others, we founded the American Jewish Congress movement. It was largely a protest against the undemocratic management of American Jewish affairs. With Justice Brandeis first as our visible and later our invisible leader, we insisted that American Jews regardless of their geographical origin or economic status were intelligent enough to manage their community affairs and not have them managed for them by well-meaning, generous philanthropists.

"Then followed the World Jewish Congress in 1936, which I helped organize with the aid of some of the most distinguished Jews of European lands. Among them was Dr. Nahum Goldmann, a brilliant statesman. The World Jewish Congress has endeavored to safeguard the rights of every minority so that the rights of Jews may not be suffered to become inferior. We who seek to safeguard our minority rights must be prepared to battle for protection of any minorities.

"In the course of more than fifty years of service, I have also been privileged to found the Free Synagogue and the Jewish Institute of Religion, the latter now merged with the Hebrew Union College, as one of the outstanding schools for the training of men for the rabbinate. The distinction of this theological seminary is that both faculty and students are free, not committed in advance to a particular form of doctrinal loyalty.

"But my abiding interest is the Free Synagogue. I have made its inspiration my starting point rather than its work my goal. A synagogue is not an end in itself. It is a means of service divine and service human, above all, such service as brings men nearer to each other within the bonds of undoctrinal fellowship."

With respect to the future, Dr. Wise declared: "I have four basic hopes. One is for a peaceful world in which justice will reign for all peoples and faiths and races. Secondly, I wish my country to become more completely and triumphantly a democracy, a land in which every religious group and race shall be wholly free to make its own ethical, spiritual, educational, artistic contribution to the treasure store of American life. America belongs to all its people; all its people must enrich and ennoble it."

"Third, I wish the Free Synagogue to reassert the democratic ideal of Israel, to democratize anew in its new building, which I pray will be completed soon and in my lifetime, the spirit and form of the present-day Synagogue. The pioneer inspirations of the Free Synagogue must be kept alive — freedom of the pulpit, freedom of the pew, and, lastly, that prophetic freedom and development which aimed at social justice, including social service, clean and wholesome city, state, national and international government.

"Fourth, for my people, I wish to see men and women of good will in every Christian Church in the world, Protestant and Catholic, come to recognize that it is not only un-Christian but indecent to treat Jews as they have been dealt with throughout many centuries. I also wish to see my people putting away the timidity with which they have been too long afflicted. I see them not only free but using that freedom to right wrong wherever inflicted or threatened, free as a people in their own land of Israel and free from assault in other lands upon the right of Jews to live as man with men."

The diamond jubilee dinner in celebration of Dr. Wise's birthday will be presided over by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., and among the prominent speakers will be U. S. Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Dr. John Haynes Holmes, and Hon. Eliahu Epstein, the latter representing the new State of Israel. Representatives of many congregations will attend, as well as those from national bodies served by Dr. Wise during his more than fifty years of service to Jewry and the nation.

The Role Of The Synagogue

"And let them make me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them." (Ex. 25: 8)

Long before the Israelites entered the promised land and built the Temple in Jerusalem, they were commanded in the desert of Sinai to erect the Tabernacle. The Tabernacle was a portable synagogue. Every Israelite was called upon to make a voluntary contribution toward the erection of the Tabernacle. And it is significant to observe that so generous were the offerings made that the architects complained of receiving too many donations.

Each people is known for its special greatness. The Italians have excelled in music; the Greeks in the art of beauty; the Romans in the building of roads; the Egyptians in the construction of pyramids. Israel is distinguished for its religious contribution to the world. Hence the Israelites were the first builders of sanctuaries in recognition of the worship of the One God. Actually, the synagogue as the three-fold institution of prayer, of study, and of community life arose in the Babylonian exile. With the destruction of the Second Temple by the Romans in the year 70 of the common era, Jews wandering over the face of the earth built everywhere miniature sanctuaries.

From the synagogue arose the Christian Church and the Mohammedan Mosque. Churches and mosques are synagogues and the ritual of these institutions for the most part is taken from synagogue worship. In the middle ages many organizations answering urgent communal needs became associated with synagogue life. Thus there was the synagogue free school, the society for visiting the sick, the society to care for the poor, the fraternity for the burial of the dead, and the classes for adults.

As we examine the synagogue's role in Jewish life, we find in the first place that the synagogue has served as the place of retreat. Who can deny that the modern Jew is not in need of the sanctuary where he may find rest and be rescued from the daily routine? Truly, in the synagogue we can come to find healing for heart aches. Here, too, we can come to thank God for the joys of life.

Often the synagogue has been called "the shul". What an appropriate name! For within the synagogue we come to learn the Jewish heritage and to be trained in the ideals and the ethics of our faith. The synagogue must ever continue to be the training ground for Jews, young and old. Alas, often, the synagogue has been infantilized and the wrong impression has been abroad that children only are to attend the synagogue school. Throughout the ages study for adults has been one of the most important of programs in connection with synagogue life.

Surely, through the centuries the synagogue has been the shelter where the persecuted Jew has found refuge from a hostile world. Here his spirit was strengthened to continue the combat for survival and to engage in the struggle for the building of God's Kingdom on earth. Where was the hope for the restoration of Zion kept alive? Were it not for the synagogue the glorious hour which we now experience in Jewish history, that of the reconstitution of the Jewish state in Palestine, could never have come about.

Many nations were exiled but none has survived except Israel. Many nations were destroyed but none experience re-birth except Israel. The synagogue thus gave immortality to the Jewish people. In this hour of national re-birth we must toil for a spiritual re-birth. The Jewish State, we pray, will prosper and bring blessings not only to the Jews of Palestine, but to Jews throughout the world. But remember we must, that the Jewish State is only a part of Israel Universal.

Israel Universal must continue to witness to God and work for the one world of universal righteousness as visioned by the Jewish prophets. Thus Judaism is greater than Jewish statehood. Let us not, therefore, attempt to depreciate the Diaspora. Eretz Israel and the Diaspora must ever be engaged in the historic partnership of Judaism's message to the world.

We look forward to the revival of synagogue life in North America. What the synagogue needs above all else at this time is inspired men and women, men of faith, men of vision, who, with a sense of consecration, will work to make the synagogue truly the central institution of Jewish communal organizations. Here within the walls of the modern synagogue must be recaptured the art of Jewish prayer, Jewish music, Jewish knowledge, and Jewish ethics.

We dare not rely on philanthropic endeavor alone, for history records that where a Jewish community neglected the study of Torah and neglected prayer, such a community perished from the face of the earth. The non-Jewish historian, Hertford, well points out: "In all their long history the Jewish people have done scarcely anything more wonderful than to create the synagogue." With the rise of the State of Israel American and Canadian Jewry must intensify synagogue life for the synagogue constitutes not only the firm witness to our past but the most dependable stake in the future.

CHURCH OFFICIAL

that they have the same sympathy for refugee Arabs as Christians throughout the world showed for Jews when they were expelled from Nazi Germany, he continued.

Dr. Leiper deplored the action of "Jewish pressure groups in Washington" who seek to influence United States foreign policy in unconstitutional ways for the benefit of Israel. American Jews cannot be considered real Americans if they subvert the foreign interests of the United States to those of Israel, he said.

PURIM CURIOSITIES: THINGS YOU NEVER KNEW ABOUT THE HOLIDAY

From The Purim Anthology, By Philip Goodman, Director of Jewish Education For The National Jewish Welfare Board

The Book of Esther is the only book in the Bible which does not mention God's name. Rabbi Hai Gaon explained this omission by saying that Mordecai knew that the Persians would copy it and he did not want His name used for idolatrous purposes. Paradoxically, the Additions to the Book of Esther in the Apocrypha, which was not considered divinely inspired, included a prayer by Esther in which the Lord's name is found.

In sharp contrast to all the other biblical books, Palestine is not mentioned in the Book of Esther. The only reference to the relationship of the Jews of Persia with their ancient homeland is that Mordecai is described as one who had been carried away from Jerusalem with the captives . . . (Esther 2.6).

The longest verse in the Bible is Esther 8.9, which has 43 words in Hebrew and 90 words in the English translation.

The 14th of Adar, on which Purim is generally celebrated, never occurs on the Sabbath. The Jews of Jerusalem who observe the 15th of Adar, which does occasionally fall on the Sabbath, have then a peculiar situation on their hands. They celebrate a "three day Purim," Friday, the 14th, the Megillah is read; on Saturday, the 15th, the blessing "who wrought miracles" is recited; and on Sunday, the 16th, the Purim meal takes place.

At one time Purim was known as Mordecai's Day in honor of the hero of the Book of Esther.

In the states of Missouri and Louisiana there are towns called Esther. In the latter state there is also a town known as Estherwood.

Queen Esther Street is found in the heart of the all-Jewish city, Tel Aviv, Israel.

From 1861 until the beginning of this century, there was a Purim Association in New York City, founded and supported by a group of young men interested in celebrating Purim in a refined way. This association held annual Purim balls in such places as the old Madison Square Garden and the Academy of Music. Proceeds were contributed to various Jewish charities.

In 1852, there was founded in New York, the Queen Esther Ladies Society, which held annual balls on Purim for a number of years.

In a speech by Hitler on January 30, 1944, he said that, if the Nazis went down to defeat, the Jews could celebrate "a second triumphant Purim."

An American eye-witness to the hanging of Julius Streicher, one of the first Nazi war criminals to be executed, reported that he shouted, as he was led to the scaffold, "Purim Feast, 1946". Streicher forgot or didn't know that Purim commemorates not the hanging of Haman but the saving of the Jews from Haman's plot.

During World War II, the Jews of England celebrated Purim in the underground air-raid shelters but were cautioned against using the traditional rattles since they were important signals of the air protection units.

In India there is observed a festival which, by strange coincidence, greatly resembles Purim and which usually occurs on the 14th of Adar.

Hadassah was founded on Purim in 1912 as the Hadassah Chapter of a National organization to be called the Daughters of Zion. Hadassah is the Hebrew equivalent of Esther.

U.S. LEADERS

mer director of a DP camp in Berlin, who was once a truck driver, told the delegates of their experiences overseas and their happiness on arriving at last in America.

"United Service is the principal agency in the United States concerned with the care of Jewish refugees", Mr. Rosenwald told the community leaders during their visit to the shelter. "The vast majority of Jewish immigrants are assisted by United Service with funds raised through the United Jewish Appeal. Food and clothing, medical care and vocational training are provided until the newcomers become self-supporting. They are assisted in their resettlement throughout the country away from the crowded ports of entry."

Throughout their stay at the shelter, the delegates visited all parts of the building, and observed the routine functioning of its various departments. They saw the nursery, library, medical office, clothing depot, synagogue and other facilities which United Service maintains for the comfort of refugees, and to assist them in their speedy adjustment to American life.

While in Europe, the United Jewish Appeal Overseas Delegation are meeting American diplomatic representatives in France and Italy, and being received by top government leaders in those countries. The group will inspect Joint Distribution Committee child-care and rehabilitation centers in Paris, the network of transient camps operated by the Joint Distribution Committee in Marseilles, which has become a staging area for the thousands of Jews who leave Europe for Israel every month, UJA-supported installations in Rome and the program being carried on in North Africa for needy and diseased local Jews. The Joint Distribution Committee, the United Service, and the United Palestine Appeal constitute the three agencies supported by the United Jewish Appeal.

In Israel, in addition to meeting with President Chaim Weizmann and Premier David Ben Gurion, the Americans are being formally received by the new Israeli Constituent Assembly. The delegates will visit housing, agricultural and irrigation projects now under way with the aid of the United Jewish Appeal funds.

The delegation will include representatives from New York City; Los Angeles; Chicago, Peoria, Ill.; Baltimore; Boston; Detroit; Kansas City; St. Louis; Jersey City and Passaic, N.J.; Buffalo, Rochester and Troy, N.Y.; Cleveland; Allentown, Pa.; Dallas and other cities.

EGYPT

Zionist movement, although such membership was not illegal at the time.

The personal rights of foreign citizens and of all the Jews, whether Egyptians or not, are constantly being violated. They are being subjected to harassment, arbitrary discrimination and internment, to searches in their homes and businesses.

By deliberate incitation or tacit acquiescence of the Egyptian government, a spirit of fanatical hatred of foreigners and non-Moslem Egyptians, especially Jews, has been aroused in the populace. This has expressed itself in repeated organized mob violence, in the course of which a number of Europeans and Americans have been murdered, as well as a minimum of fifty native Jews.

The press, acting on the government's instructions, ceaselessly urges hatred of foreign countries, including the United States, and of Jews, native and foreign. In this criminal conduct the Egyptian government is primarily motivated by the desire to divert the dissatisfaction of its own citizenry, well grounded in intolerable domestic conditions and disastrous foreign adventures, into hatred and murder of the foreigner and the Jew.

The above report on the "general reign of terror directed against residents of Egypt, who are citizens of foreign countries, non-Moslems and Jews," prepared by the legal and overseas staffs of the AJC, summarizes a thirty-five page document plus exhibits lodged by the AJC with the Department of State. It was made public last month in a press interview by Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, honorary president, and Joel D. Wolfsohn, director of overseas operations, who urged intercession of the US Government and UN action against Egyptian violations of the Declaration of Human Rights and the Genocide Convention.

Somewhat embarrassed by the tears they caused were two former members of the 6th Marine Division, who came to see Mr. and Mrs. Veniamin Mordohovich and their nineteen-year-old daughter, Mickey.

"When are you coming to see us in Palestine?" Mrs. Mordohovich asked Edward Dworkin, who came on from Shaker Heights, Ohio, and Nathan Beck, of Newark, N.J.

"Soon, we hope," Mr. Dworkin answered, as Mr. Beck asked, "Will you take as good care of us there as you did in China?" The Mordohovich family, the former marines explained, often served them with Yiddish dishes in Tsingtao during the war.

Many of the D. P.'s complained that they resented being kept behind wired windows on the island. One of these was Mrs. Esther Veinerman, twenty-eight, whose son, Ronald, "eight and a bit," was wrestling with another boy in the group and grunting Russian words.

"Ronald," his mother explained, "speaks English and Russian and swears in Chinese."

"We feel that this is a historic moment, as we are the first group in the migration of Jews to Israel from all over the world who were allowed to pass through the United States," said Abraham Frank, 26, former night editor of The China Press in Shanghai. "We are deeply grateful to the United States Government for extending to us the privilege without a visa."

About two-thirds of the refugees are stateless Jews from Austria and Germany who went to Shanghai in 1939 when, as a free port, it was the only place to which they could flee without a visa. The other third are White Russians who settled in Shanghai following the Bolshevik revolution in 1917, and their children. A small number of Iraqis, Poles, Turks, Czechs and Yugoslavs complete the roster.

ham Granovsky, chairman of the National Fund, said they were acting for their respective organizations, "beneficiaries in Israel of the income of the United Jewish Appeal and previously combined for fund-raising purposes in the United Palestine Appeal."

The decision to proceed immediately with the campaign was also taken for the Joint Distribution Committee by Edward M. M. Warburg, its chairman, and by Edwin Rosenberg, president of the United Service for New Americans.

Mr. Warburg, commenting on action, said:

"The Joint Distribution Committee has an especially grave task in 1949. It has assumed major responsibility for transporting hundreds of thousands of Jews into Israel from the DP camps, from other European centers, from North Africa and elsewhere, while simultaneously aiding emigration of Jews elsewhere, including the United States.

"We feel that all American Jews, in their communities and as individuals, will appreciate that the United Jewish Appeal is one area in which we must unite for constructive action on behalf of our people. We cannot afford the luxury of continued discussion while the lives of human beings are at stake. It is for that reason that the JDC has joined in giving the signal to the Jewish communities to proceed forthwith with their campaigns on behalf of the United Jewish Appeal."

exported. The project's possibilities are so far reaching, according to Mr. Weisgal, that the industrial base of the country might be changed radically.

Mr. Weisgal also disclosed that a scientific company of Boston had taken over Israel's patents for removing salt from water and planned to market the process throughout the world. The institute, he said, expects a large royalty return from this transaction.

The process will be particularly applicable in the Negeb, where the ancient wells contain salty or brackish water that presently cannot be used for irrigation purposes. It would also be possible to pipe sea water into the area and convert it on the spot.

Dr. Weizmann will leave on April 8 on a special United States Government plane. He will stop in Paris and arrive in New York on April 12. He will attend a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel on April 23 and make one public appearance in Washington before returning about the first week in May. Mr. Weisgal presented him with the pen President Truman used to sign the United States de jure recognition of Israel.

The large-scale U.S. Federal program for tuberculosis control cannot be successful without the aid in therapy and rehabilitation offered by such organizations as the National Jewish Hospital at Denver, Colorado, Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, said, addressing the annual meeting of trustees and patrons of the National Jewish Hospital in New York. The gathering marked the opening of the fiftieth year for the nonsectarian institution, which has provided free tuberculosis treatment to more than 1,000 patients a year. The Surgeon General emphasized that the Federal program, begun in 1944, provides primarily screening rather than therapeutic service. He praised the National Jewish Hospital for the treatment, vocational training, psychic readjustment and rehabilitation it offers to patients discovered by the screening process.
